SITUATIONS AT CHICAGO ARE OF CONFUSION

tending political conventions since 1880, said today:

"I have never seen such a wide-open-convention. Each candidate will have his chance here. I enjoy the situation; believe it is a healthy condition. I think there are 600 uninstructed delegates at this convention."

Although the Pennsylvania delegation of 76 is under instructions to cast its first ballot for Gov. Sproul of that state, with Sproul definitely under pledge to carry through the wishes of Senator Penrose, no one knows exactly which candidate this tower of strength will prop, but today as yesterday, the tip was strong that Senator

Harding of Ohio could have it if he needed it to go over the top.

Senator Hiram Johnson is not known to be at peace with Eastern republicans of power, but his friends here, and they are numerous, are fighting desperately for him as "the man who can win the election next fall."

Lowden, Wood, Johnson and Pendergast are making a determined fight on the ground. Delegates are under terrific pressure from each of them, the former three hoping for a quick decision when balloting starts next Friday.

Pendergast seems to be hoping for a late result. The same is true of Harding, who will come in late Sunday or Monday morning without fireworks. Butler men are doing little active work on the ground. Coolidge's friends are moderately active. Hoover is a distinctly receptive candidate, his legion of local workers say, as they go about from button-hole to button-hole talking about him as "a man of works" and "high distinction." This is a peculiarly quiet work, the psychology of which rests upon the power of calm persuasion.

Wood has less than 200 instructed delegates, Johnson has little more than 100 instructed delegates and the third member of the "Big Three," Gov. Lowden, has about the same. The rest are split up among the various favorite sons, to whose support they are not pledged after the first ballots.

After the first ballots, these delegates are in imminent danger of splitting up into small groups so numerous that to weld them together in a cohesive, voting mass would be a Herculean task.

Half a dozen men are ambitious today to fall heir to the job of the "straw boss" lying on a sick bed in Philadelphia. Not one of them can now muster sufficient strength to weld the parts of an organization together. Among those who are prominently mentioned are: A. T. Hert of Kentucky; James B. Keating of Indiana; J. T. King of Connecticut; Charles B. Warren of Michigan; Jim Watson of Indiana and Coleman Dupont of Delaware.

The one show of strength revealed to date is that a good sized majority of the national committee is anti-Wood. Less than half a dozen Wood delegates have been seated out of nearly 130 contestants in which he had entered candidacies.

Most of the contests have gone in favor of Lowden. But this has been true, not out of any particular leaning towards the Illinois governor, but because as between the governor and the general, the republican organization favors the governor.
